WebSafe and Shoebox Foto Gallery Announce Partnership

BIRMINGHAM (October 26, 2007) - WebSafe, Inc. and Shoebox Foto Gallery today announced a partnership. Shoebox Foto Gallery will use WebSafe's Internet based file storage solution to preserve and share home photography which Shoebox Foto Gallery has scanned for their customers.

Shoebox Foto Gallery chose WebSafe to store its customers' valuable memories so that not only are their photos secure, but can be accessed years down the road without the need for any conversion to the latest media. WebSafe stores data in a highly secure hosting facility, Southern Telecom, a wholly owned subsidiary of Southern Company (NYSE:SO). All data is encrypted during transmission and while stored on WebSafe servers.

"WebSafe is a powerful solution that is very easy to use and provides our customers the assurance that important photographs or documents that we have scanned are safely stored and sharable with family and friends" said Craig Reeves, President of Shoebox Foto Gallery. "DVDs have a limited life span, can only be shared by making copies and are subject to being destroyed by fire or simply lost. WebSafe eliminates the need for customers to convert to new storage media each time technology changes and is an ideal complement to the service which we provide."

"Shoebox Foto Gallery uniquely addresses the problem of digitally capturing photographs, 35mm slides, photo albums, recipes, kids' school/art work, and important documents such as birth certificates, passports, deeds, insurance policies, and wills" said Donald B. Moore, Director of Business Development for WebSafe. "Consumers can now take advantage of the ability of Shoebox Foto Gallery to quickly scan their valuable documents and not be worried about storage on media that may prove unworkable over the years."
